CHILE WILL FILIBUSTER.

Plan to Talk Arbitration to Death in Debate.

A dispatch from Mexico City last night says: The obstructive tactics of Chile, which were clearly revealed at today's sessions, begins to make it appear that it will be practically impossible to ever bring either of the arbitration projects to a vote unless some rule resembling censure of the British parliament is adopted, as the Chileans will continue to talk indefinitely. After attacking throughout the afternoon session the plan of general acceptance of The Hague articles as having been fairly adopted, they finally changed front, dropped their own plan of acceptance, and gave their assent to the general plan, but insisted that instead of merely passing through the conference, it be submitted thereto for debate.

They know, it is claimed, that if it is only debated, they will be able to delay matters indefinitely and in the meantime work for the withdrawal of more Central and South American delegations, until they have succeeded in wrecking the conference. The discussion will be continued at an extra session tomorrow morning.

Chile's object in presenting an appropriate plan of adherence to The Hague convention is to cause its plan to be referred to the committee on arbitration, in which event the committee will either have to accept it, or if it rejects the conference will be placed in the position of discarding what it has already approved, in either of which cases Chile will score a point, besides delaying other work.

The delegations that have been fairly favorable to Chile are now experiencing a change. But what excites the greatest indignation is the efforts of Chile to undermine the conference by procuring the withdrawal of delegates, as in the case of Venezuela.

Why Not?
